

CAMINO

LEADERSHIP NOTES ON THE ROAD

LEANDRO HERRERO

DO SOMETHING WITH THIS BOOK

THINK

SHARE

NOTE

PRESENT

APPLY

SUBSCRIBE

TAKE ON TRIP

BOOKMARK

REFLECT

DISCUSS

HAVE A CUP

FOR OTHERS

OTHER BOOKS BY LEANDRO HERRERO:

The Flipping Point

Deprogramming Management

The Trouble with Management (out of print)

The Leader with Seven Faces

Finding your own ways of practicing leadership in today's organization

New Leaders Wanted: Now Hiring!

12 kinds of people you must find, seduce, hire and create a job for

Viral Change™

The Alternative To Slow, Painful and Unsuccessful Management of Change in Organizations

Disruptive Ideas. 10+10+10=1000

The maths of Viral Change™ that transform organizations

Ideas Rompedoras

Las reglas del Cambio Viral para transformer organizaciones

Homo Imitans

The art of social infection: Viral Change™ in action

However

Work Could Be Remarkable

SOON TO BE AVAILABLE:

The Little Book of Big Change

Universal rules for change makers

Unplugged

Organizations under new management

Homo Imitans

(second edition)

Exotics on the payroll

The anthropology of life in organizations

Victims or agents?

The modern choices of employee engagement

---

All books are available on Amazon, Barnes and Noble, Blackwell's, Waterstones, Books Etc. and many other bookshops.

For book enquiries and bulk orders please contact:

meetingminds@thechalfontproject.com

CAMINO

Text copyright © 2021 Leandro Herrero

Designed by Rachel Barker

Leandro Herrero has asserted his moral right to be identified as the author of this work in accordance with the Copyright, Design and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without the prior written consent of the copyright owner.

Disclaimer

The author and Meetingminds shall have neither liability nor responsibility to any person or entity with respect to any loss or damage caused, or alleged to have been caused, directly or indirectly, by the information contained in this book.

First published in 2021 by: Meetingminds

Meetingminds is a division of The Chalfont Project.

The Chalfont Project Ltd, Charter Building, Charter Place, Uxbridge, United Kingdom UB8 1JG

Email: meetingminds@thechalfontproject.com

ISBN 978-1-905776-19-1

A CIP catalogue record for this title is available from the British Library.

CAMINO

LEADERSHIP NOTES ON THE ROAD

LEANDRO HERRERO

20 BASE CAMP

KINVARA,
THE HARBOUR

- 24 'What if the problem is me?'
An uncomfortable, key question for leaders
- 26 Emotional Ignorance needs a book
- 27 20 Reasons why I trust you
- 28 Bring 'character' back
- 30 Pilot or pastor? From the No
Nonsense Francis School of Leadership
- 32 His greatest success was not to fail
- 33 Do visionary leaders nominate non-visionary successors?
- 34 In doubt, make it personal
- 36 The death of the charismatic leadership has been grossly exaggerated
- 38 The era of Narcissus
- 40 Leadership's hearing problems
- 41 5 things very successful leaders have in common
- 42 To be a better leader, take a holiday from yourself
- 44 Choosing between honest arrogance and hypocritical humility
- 46 Leadership is a social concept, not an individual trait. But we are fascinated by the individual stock
- 48 Your most important list of personal assets. Take time. Now?

JOURNEY

- 50 The many 'me' inside Me need some discovery: have a go
They all seem to come for dinner
- 51 Heaven is empty of self-centred people
- 52 There are good leaders, excellent leaders, and Gold leaders
This is what Gold looks like
- 54 Leadership dialects: you are supposed to join a party, but don't get an invitation
- 56 The leader as a blank screen,
on which others project
- 58 'Human' and 'leadership' can go together by inviting our demons for dinner
- 60 Why people 'with leadership traits'
don't become leaders
- 62 'Self, us and now': the very old, uncomfortable trio for a modern look at leadership
- 64 There is something only you can do:
be yourself Everything else can be outsourced
- 66 My contradictions are my friends, and they come with me as leader
- 68 My shopping list for new leaders:

OXFORD,
BLACKWELL'S

- 82 Five spaces that the organizational leader needs to design and nurture
- 84 'The things you do not have to say make you rich'

- 85 'You don't have to attend every argument to which you are invited'
- 86 A 6th Century Leadership Manual starts with the word 'Listen!'
- 88 For leadership, look around, not in research papers
- 90 The three 'magic' words: transparency, clarity and fairness
- 92 Trust is like pregnancy. You can't have a bit of it.
- 93 3 versions of speed
- 94 10 Rules of Self-Survival: The Border Diet
- 96 It's official: the single, magic bullet that characterises good leadership is to back off
- 98 Leadership's Splendid Expeditions
- 100 'I told them once; they didn't understand. I told them twice; they didn't understand. I told them three times and I understood'.
- 101 'Grasp the facts, misses the meaning': The Leadership Dyslexia upon us
- 102 It takes only one question to know about your model of leadership (and there is always an alternative question, just in case)
- 104 'If you want to revenge someone, prepare two graves'. On leadership and digging.
- 106 The moral choices of leadership, courtesy of Pedro, my taxi driver in Panama
- 108 Lead in Poetry, manage in Prose
- 110 'The tyranny of the moment'. Liberating Leaders Wanted.

- 112 'The top leaders are not specific, they don't tell us what they expect'. This is very good news.
- 114 All thoughts come out of silence. Leadership development may turn out to be free after all.
- 116 Leaders who have little control of things, but who think they have a lot of it, are the ones who fear losing control the most
- 118 'A desk is a dangerous place from which to view the world'
- 120 Certainty is addictive. Leaders, handle with care
- 122 Human behaviour laws are unfair. Positive or negative consequences are disproportionate to the causes. Get used to it as leader.
- 124 The most powerful leadership instructions are the ones that are unsaid
- 126 Leadership and the art of managing disappointments
- 127 Reflection is subversive. Uprise! Slow down!
- 128 The collaboration of rivals is always the strongest. Try it!
- 130 'Leave it with me' is a magic behaviour. Spontaneous 'jumping in' and helping, if widespread, is like winning the lottery.
- 132 Your mental frame, as defined by words, will dictate your actions. Even your values. Words are dictators.
- 134 Bold leadership pays off. It can also be killed by those who are highly paid to be professionally afraid.

- 136 For any 'what you say' there are always many 'how you say it'. Impact is in the how.
- 138 10 reasons why leaders need to focus on the (unmanaging of the) informal organization

CADAQUÉS, EL MARITIM

- 146 If I were the CEO's speechwriter for a day, this is the speech I would pass on
- 148 Imperfect data, imperfect instructions, low predictability, high trust: just a model for business (from boat racing)
- 150 'I am the captain. We are on a collision course'
- 151 Three ways to get approval from your CEO or your leadership team
- 152 The indecision is final. Keep calm and wait for the next.
- 154 The leader who said, 'make your numbers' instead of, 'have a good trip back'
- 156 History is constructed the leader's legacy is not retrospective. We build it daily, so we'd better test it.
- 158 Management is political campaigning inside. Leadership is winning campaigns. Warning: this statement will be dismissed.
- 160 Top leadership needs to role model, lead by example and live the values. Now that we have said it, can we please stop talking about it?

- 162 Shifting the narrative: one of the finest roles of leadership
- 164 Thinking leadership in terms of legacy. There will be one.
- 166 Where there is too much vision, people perish faster
- 167 Seducing minds versus hiring people. Just imagine.
- 168 Authentically disruptive
- 170 Iconic leadership: the illusion of copying a one-off
- 172 The 3 grand 'D's' ('direction, discovery and destiny'), also have their 3 little but powerful 'd' sisters
- 174 Manage the inevitable, lead the unpredictable, allow yourself to do both
- 176 The best organizational model is the one that has more than one under the roof
- 178 A 3-point leadership strategy for your transformation, small T, big T
- 180 Competing on mistakes
- 182 'Getting out of the way', as a leadership strategy
- 183 If you need to parachute help, send builders, not problem solvers
- 184 Have your big white board of distractions in front. Keep your list very fresh. Then, execute the strategy.
- 186 When your organisation not only has good leadership but is a leadership lab, a live school for leaders, we are talking serious cutting edge

- 188 Thought leadership is making people think, or there is not much thought or leadership. Maybe journalistic leadership?
- 190 Write a script, not a strategic plan
- 192 If you have two guys who think the same, fire one of them
- 194 The journey: for a Himalayan trip, trust a few good shepherds. Including your company Himalayas.
- 196 All the roads lead to Rome, but mind the axle of the car
- 197 5 Questions robots ask (how to spot a robot, since they are coming)
- 198 Organizational decluttering: a crusade in waiting that may need you as leader

SALAMANCA, PLAZA MAYOR

- 206 I'll say it again: people are not resistant to change
- 208 The tragedy of the obvious
- 209 In management of change, as in leadership of organizations, 'every day is election day'
- 210 The tragedy of the obvious, part 2. The obvious things in 'management of change' (and still we can't see the donkeys)
- 212 3 Inconvenient truths about leadership and change
- 214 No hiding leadership: 'we are the ones we've been waiting for. We are the change that we seek'.

- 215 Prolonged agony in reorganizations is simply bad management
- 216 Leadership in organizations is about mobilizing people. The leader is a 'social arsonist'.
- 218 I'm now of an age when I only want to work with people who want to change the world
- 220 Framing is a leadership must
- 226 Management technique: the transplant
- 228 We need the aliens. Everybody needs aliens. Smart aliens who can ask questions and open pandora boxes for us.
- 230 Have you heard the one about the three envelopes? There is a whole theory of management behind it.
- 232 The soft stuff and the hard stuff. Convenient split, but unreal. Leadership is neither hard nor soft.
- 234 Leaders, dealers and dreamers
- 236 Oh, mental frames! How easy to create misery!
- 237 Leadership: the way of the cat and the way of the monkey
- 238 Leadership is an amoral praxis. How about this to start a conversation?
- 240 Management upside down: global is local, leadership goes grassroots, top is at the bottom and traditional management needs a retirement party.
- 242 Within us, between us and around us. The only 3 chapters of psychology and the only 3 modules of leadership development.

- 244 The pilgrimage to the top of the leadership mountain to ask for permission, blessings and a bit of gratification
- 246 20 Rules of leadership
- 248 Leadership scaffolding. Let's try this mental model.
- 250 The leader is not an answerphone. Or a help desk.
- 251 When necessary use words
- 252 The inevitability principle is inevitably wrong. Leaders must avoid it.
- 254 Reinventing management is reinventing the skill set. It's urgent, and the answers are elsewhere, not in traditional management practices.
- 256 The 'research' for the real-real unique attributes of world class leadership is embarrassing

SANTIAGO DE COMPOSTELA, PRAZA DO OBRADOIRO

- 264 When management is overweight, leadership may be starving
- 266 Backstage Leadership™ is key to collective leadership, a cornerstone of the modern organization
- 267 Leadership is not an HR topic. It's also not outsourceable. You are stuck with it.
- 268 All teams with a 'sell-by-date'
- 270 Intolerance, Diversity and Exclusion: It's behavioural!

- 272 Top Influencers 2, Top Leadership 1 (Hierarchical power in the organization is half of the 'peer-to-peer' power)
- 274 'It's about you, and between you (not us at the top, not the leadership team)'
- 276 Great players, great training, wrong game
- 278 'Paths, not works'. A philosopher's metaphor that explains our leadership challenges well.
- 280 Pope Francis' description of the 15 diseases of the Catholic Church administration apparatus (Curia) says a lot about the universal traps of human organizations
- 284 But what do they think? What do they want us to do? Why don't they just tell us?
- 286 The Twenty Percenters
- 287 The organization's collective self-belief is often hidden. Leaders need to hear the unsaid.
- 288 From 'us and them' to 'us with them'. Don't kill the 'us' on behalf of a fictitious 'global'
- 290 Blasting middle management is a sign of leadership incompetence
- 292 Navel-gazing (Nombrilisme in French, sounds much better) is constant in the organization. The issue is not to deny it, but to fight it.
- 294 Management: by invitation. Unbundle reporting lines and management teams.

- 297 The problem with too many decisions pushed up to the top of the organization usually lies with those at the top who complain most
- 298 10 reasons why you should retire 'Passion' from your value system
- 300 I wouldn't hire anybody who is likely to follow the job description
- 302 Employee loyalty is a plural. Leadership is the host of that plurality, always an irrational mix.
- 304 Reclaiming the human values language for the corporate world
- 306 If leadership in organizations followed some 'activism rules'; not standard management logic. Here is one rule.
- 308 'The conference': Tribes talking to themselves
- 310 The 7 Habits of Highly Effective Killers (in the organization)
- 312 Do competence-based management and leadership systems create better managers or leaders? (Sorry for the inconvenient question)
- 314 Archaeologists usually don't build houses. We have lots of archaeologists on the payroll.
- 316 An enlightened top leadership is sometimes a fantastic alibi for a non-enlightened management to do whatever they want
- 318 How many people on your payroll have never licked a stamp?
- 320 Some workplaces are 'non-places' and as inspiring as Clinical Isolation Units

- 322 Some company cultures are works of fiction. Some leadership teams 'harrypotter' a narrative that nobody else recognises.

LA HABANA, PARQUE CENTRAL

- 330 Don't let the expression 'this is just business' be synonymous for inhuman. Business? Not in my name.
- 332 Could the 'global teenager' teach us about 'global leadership'?
- 333 Don't trust armchair critics, reformers and broadcasters of leadership who don't know what a dry cleaners is
- 334 Competition glorified: you are not a student, employee or citizen, you are a contestant
- 336 The video and the audio of empowerment are out of sync
- 337 Saturday poem for leaders who don't read poems
- 338 'If you put the federal government in charge of the Sahara Desert, in 5 years there'd be a shortage of sand'
- 339 I make my best clients restless. I make the others comfortable.
- 340 There are off-the-shelf accounting packages to buy and use. There can't be such a thing as an off-the-shelf Leadership Development Programme.
- 342 My friends, the monks', secret weapon: the asterisk. I want Leadership with tons of them

- 344 'We have no time' people and 'there is plenty of time' people, share the same sixty-minute hour
- 345 It's still Day One: the winning philosophy of Day Two and Day Two Thousand
- 346 My top 5 Leadership questions at the top of the agenda
- 348 The 'Call me Peter' School of Leadership
- 350 The leadership team tipping point: the arrow points South
- 352 The 'Great Man' model of leadership is alive and well, despite largely exaggerated accounts of its death
- 354 The world is flat, leadership is global, and I want to go home
- 356 The Leader with Seven Faces. A model of leadership that requires a mirror.
- 358 May I introduce you to our worst enemy? The word average.
- 360 Stop press: The C-suite people, and top leadership, major problem revealed
- 362 The formula about what to do when 'leadership does not get it', finally revealed
- 364 'You can have any colour of leadership as long as it is white'. This is our 'Ford translation' in organizations.
- 366 A tsunami of navel-gazing, force 11, is impacting business, society and politics. And individual identity
- 368 Is leadership so elusive? Or only in the hands of academics?

- 370 Corporate grammar could learn from Obama's spelling guidelines
- 371 Martin Luther King's 'I have a dream' was not in the script
- 372 7 Rules to negotiate and lead (and control your destiny). Number 5 is the tricky one.
- 373 The best question is the one which has no answer
- 374 'Our best days are yet to come. Our proudest moments are yet to be. Our most glorious achievements are just ahead'.
- 376 Good leaders are a bit like corporate anthropologists, without the six months in Tanzania
- 377 Three magic questions for leaders
- 378 'What is in it for me?' Don't answer that for anybody
- 379 The tragedy of corporate shallowness. A call to wake up
- 380 The arithmetic of suffering is flawed. Leave the tape measure at the door.
- 382 Going back to normal post Covid-19, when normal is not waiting for us
- 384 Solidarity as a form of organizational culture is both a soft label and a secret weapon
- 386 The 6 stages of management teams. The origin and evolution of these species on one page.
- 388 No milk, no honey, enjoy the journey
- 390 What I learnt from the monks: a little anthropology of leadership and space on one page
- 396 PLACES

BASE CAMP

Philosopher Martin Heidegger requested before his death that the collection of his writings be called 'paths, not works'. He had used the word 'paths' several times. It provides, according to some interpreters of his 'works', an image of 'leading' but not necessarily to anywhere in particular; like many paths do in the woods.

The great Spanish poet Antonio Machado said it well in one of his most acclaimed poems. It would read in English something like this: 'Walker, there is no path, you make the path by walking'.

The allegory of the path, whether Machado's path making or Heidegger's 'paths, not works', is a good metaphor for leadership. I really believe that cartography and leadership are twin sisters.

Pilgrimage is also another good metaphor for the leadership journey, a journey that can be done in solitude but also accompanied by followers. The pilgrimage has both the personal and the collective, all in one. The journey contains all sorts of challenges and discoveries for the pilgrim, as it does for the leader. The difference in the pilgrimage is that it has a fixed destination. But arriving is never landing by helicopter. You have to walk, to go, to move, bit by bit, and then sense, learn, live.

Every year, about 300,000 people walk the Camino de Santiago (The Way of St James) a network of routes starting in France or Portugal, or Spain itself, and that ends in Santiago de Compostela, in Galicia, Spain. Probably a minority will walk the 'required' last 100 km on pure religious grounds. But most will talk later about the transformative effects of the Camino, the route, the pilgrimage.

Constantine P. Cavafy is one of my favourite poets, and Ithaca my favourite one. He describes the perils of the journey to the mythical Ithaca. A destination. 'Keep Ithaca always in your mind. Arriving there is what you're destined for'. But he says that most of those perils may be in your head. And then he recommends to take your time, not to rush, go slowly, stop in all the ports, learn from the locals, and buy their perfumes. And he warns, maybe when you finally get to Ithaca, you'll be disappointed. It has nothing to offer compared with all you've learnt and lived and changed. 'Wise as you will have become, so full of experience, you will have understood by then what these Ithacas mean'.

Good leaders are good path makers. Sometimes the journey is not clear. The destination may still be ambiguous. Again, it's all about cartography. For me, a leader is the cartographer in chief who, whilst walking with others, also becomes an architect and a builder. If this is about journeys, and maps, and building, and Cavafy's 'enter (ing) harbours you're seeing for the first time and stopping at Phoenician trading stations, to buy fine things', then there is almost no end to it.

On my imaginary journey inside my head, I took notes and articulated ideas. Most became a Daily Thought, a blog I have been running for years. This is a collection of those notes. Don't look for Harvard here, there are only harbours and other places that have generously adopted the content between them.

In this Camino of mine, I have also learnt to spot the real things, the fundamentals, the rocks. These are my Rules. A small collection of warnings, strong views and discoveries that I do not intend to be transferable. After all, the journey is not transferable, nobody can walk the Camino for you. Liberated by the idea that I don't need to impart universal wisdom to end in a sterile case study and that I can share these rules like one shares a meal without having to explain the chemistry of the ingredients, here they are, still full of dust from my journey. The one I have only just begun.

1. Earn credibility all the time. Stocks deplete easily.
2. Act as if you do not have anything to lose.
3. Be unreasonable in your demands, the reasonable ones are taken.
4. Detect bullshit and become proficient at detecting it. Then, protect yourself and others.
5. Exercise provocation with panache and respect. Aim at being appreciated, not hated, for it.
6. Don't be a provocateur, rebel, maverick, contrarian or challenger for the sake of it. Have a good 'because' ready.
7. Infect others, don't do it alone.
8. Be restless, be uncomfortable (and foolish and hungry and the rest...). They're the only things that confirm that you are alive.
9. Watch your ego. Most of the time it is not your friend. Rule of thumb, most of the time it's not about you.
10. Never settle for one possibility only.
11. Don't waste your time managing the 'inevitable'. There is a lot of 'possible' waiting for a leader. Look for what would not happen without you.
12. Seek unpredictable answers. The predictable ones are already seeking you.
13. Don't be against anything. Don't create enemies. The exceptions are mediocrity and dishonesty.
14. Write down your little bit of daily legacy in a secret little book.
15. There is only one test: what will you tell the children? (that you do, you did, you didn't do).
16. More important than what you say is what people hear when you are saying it.
17. Practice 'I don't know', possibly followed by 'and I don't think you know either, so let's figure it out'.
18. Make things happen first, then clean up the process for the next time. In that order.
19. The unexamined leadership, like the unexamined life, is not worth living.
20. Play as many roles as you want, but never a victim or an enemy. Both being 'victim' or 'enemy', requires your full consent.

Off to the next harbour.

OXFORD, BLACKWELL'S

Five spaces that the organizational leader needs to design and nurture

What about the leader as a designer of spaces, a social architect that creates places (physical) and spaces? Not hard to imagine, but I think it is an underestimated concept, perhaps lost in the rhetoric, in the analogy.

Leaders need to create space for employee voices. For that read opportunities, platforms (digital and analogue), vehicles, processes and systems if needed, and, above all, the encouragement of behaviours: speak up, make yourself heard, provide an input, contribute, not just 'doing your job'. This is the first space.

The second space is the informal organization, the one that does not 'contain' teams, committees, task forces, fixed conference calls and any other formal structure. Here, read the corridors, the buffer time, the cafeteria, the informal brainstorm. The informal organization is the oxygen of the company. Shrink that supply at your peril. This second space is also a mixture of physical and psychological spaces. Table tennis in a corner is not enough, if there is not a culture of informal conversations or if the culture sees them – those spaces, those semi-artificial break outs - as a waste.

The third space is personal. The space to think and reflect, to look at things with a critical view, to digest and compare, to form an opinion, to open yourself to the possible aha! To say, "I have a Wednesday afternoon free for this", does not work.

It must be embedded in the culture. A culture of 24/7 busyness does not provide that space.

The fourth space is also personal. It is the space of professional and personal development. It includes, of course, formal courses and training but goes well beyond these to mentoring, to time to shadow somebody, to do something that is not in the job description, or well beyond these, stretching people's skills and imagination. This space requires the leader to not only accept, but create some slack in the system, some redundancy, some buffer that is not considered a waste. 'Personal' and 'professional' are blurred here. The thing not to do is to be obsessed with the ROI, with how doing this could have an immediate return. As soon as you start counting these beans, the desired effect goes out of the window.

The fifth space is collective. It's the space for experimentation with ideas, the generation of as many bad ones as possible, the mental prototyping of possibilities, the playing with 'unfinished thoughts' and half-baked opportunities. Many leaders hate this. These are the ones putting off employees by saying, 'come back when you have a perfect business case'. Since there is no such thing, people never go back.

Yes, leaders need to see themselves as architects, as space designers, creators, and implementors.

This is an area where, what the leader says counts less than what the leader does in this social engineering. It is therefore very silent, but the spaces will be very visible and the legacy will be enormous.

'The things you do not have to say make you rich'

William Stafford's
(1914 – 1993) poem reads:
The things you do not have to say make you rich.
Saying the things you do not have to say weakens your talk.
Hearing the things you do not have to hear dulls your hearing.
And the things you know before you hear them,
these are you and the reason you are in the world'.

Attention leaders. Judging by the above, we are pretty poor. We talk too much, we command too much, we say too much, we repeat.

I am not against the famous 'walk the talk'. It's just that I think the order is wrong. Walk first and then do the talking about the walk: why the walk, the benefits of the walk, why others should join the walk... Talk the walk!

If people see you walking, maybe then you will have less to say. And, if as a leader, you accumulate more and more things that you don't have to say, you are rich, and you are doing great as leader. This is lesson One of Disruptive Economics for Leadership.

'The things you don't have to say make you a rich leader'.

'You don't have to attend every argument to which you are invited'

This quote is from an unknown author. He or she must have known a thing or two about the futility of engaging in every single discussion that comes your way. The quote is also a proxy for 'pick your battles'. There are battles worth fighting and battles that are not. It may also serve as a reflection on what leaders choose to do.

In organizational life, people are often pulled in too many directions, where 'signal' and 'noise' get confused all the time. Big things get mixed up with small things. The important gets confused with the urgent. The strategic and the tactical become mixed up. All things become equally important, equally relevant, equally necessitating a response, to have a say, to send an 'I agree' message.

I am not fond of the word 'prioritisation'. Not that I don't believe in the need to prioritise, but I have little faith in our standard ways of doing this. For leaders, a better angle is 'What will make the difference?' Or better, 'What can I personally do that will make the difference, and perhaps only I can do?'.

We need to switch from spending our time on 'managing the inevitable', to leading what will not happen unless we lead it.

In this quest, you don't, as leader, have to attend every argument to which you are invited, you don't have to get involved in everything and certainly, you don't have to spend your time fighting every battle. The magic word is choice. Choices are always in front of you.

A 6th Century Leadership Manual starts with the word 'Listen!'

It's impossible to listen in a noisy room. If you want to listen to your breathing, you need silence. You can't listen in busyness mode; we hear lots of things, we listen to few.

Listening to music through your earphones when walking around is more hearing the music than listening to it.

We hear other people, we hear the CEO, we hear the news, we hear our team members, we hear complaints, we hear people suffering. It does not follow that we listen to any of them.

Listening is becoming a rare quality. It requires active willingness to do it.

There are four magic questions for leaders about listening:

- (1) What am I saying?
- (2) Am I being heard?
- (3) Is anybody listening?
- (4) How do I know any of the above?

In, The Leader with Seven Faces, one of my books and the basis for my Leadership Programmes, language is face number one. The above questions are key leadership hearing aids.

Listening is sometimes an anxious request. Listen to me! Would you listen! One of the oldest Standard Operating Procedures (SOP) and Leadership Manuals in the world is The Rule of Saint Benedict, written in the 6th Century for monks in monasteries, although there were other similar Rules even before. For centuries, it has inspired religious and non-religious life. It caters for all needs in the community and provides guidance and solutions to potential problems. Still today this Rule, with its modern adaptation, is in place in all Benedictine communities around the world. Benedict of Nursia, patron saint of Europe, wrote his Rule in ordinary Latin. It has a Prologue and seventy-three chapters, not bad for an SOP! The Rule starts with one single latin word, on its own: 'Ausculta', that is, Listen! Perhaps he anticipated modern organizational life.

For leadership, look around, not in research papers

Leadership has traditional sources of learning, reflection, role modelling and a 'body of knowledge'. There are four that dominate. This is my humble classification: The Military, Corporations, Civic and Religious models, and Sports.

Where do organizations borrow from for leadership models? The military source is mostly about language (as opposed to individuals). The language of war is well embedded in organizational and business thinking: killing the competition, price wars, winning and losing markets etc. Occasionally there is reference to true military strategy and leadership, but not too frequently. Civic and religious leadership is also referred to, but here instead, only with the accent on individuals. 'I have a dream' and Luther King must be the most admired example. Business organizations love sports analogies which, in my opinion, are overrated and oversized.

There is a point here, however. There are multiple sources from which to learn, mirror, copy, study, draw conclusions about Leadership. Multiple models and examples. It was in this context that some time ago, I was taken aback when invited to participate in a round table on the topic at a prestigious global business school. The Head of Research presented their five-year research data on the future of leadership. It consisted of in-depth interviews with most of the Chairmen and CEOs of top FTSE 500 companies and from this he claimed that they now knew what the future of leadership looked like. That was it!

I put it to them that they had completely missed the point and the views of the Chairman of Coca Cola, for example, (with all due respect to the Chairman of Coca Cola) were hardly relevant to day to day leadership in organizations.

There is a myriad – I pointed out – of small or not so small enterprises that are full of people 'leading' from day to day, navigating through life, with different degrees of resilience and most of them without a golden parachute should they screw up. 'Where was that data?' I inquired.

I didn't like the way he looked at me and I realised I was turning into a Martian to them. I am sure that 'the research team' enjoyed a pleasant travel budget and found the research rewarding, but to call this the latest on the leadership of the future was slightly insulting to say the least.

Every day we miss the reality that is there in front of our eyes, in favour of the big names and big label position papers and reports. For leadership, it's easy: look around. Don't look up at The Big Names. Or don't look at them only. Try schools, neighbourhoods, community leaders, small companies, medium and big, churches, public servants, good CEOs even if not those on the front page of the newspapers. We are rich in examples of good leadership. As rich as we are poor in so-called 'research'.

Sorry, it's not about what the CEOs of the FTSE 500 think. Leadership, good or bad, is all around us, because it's a praxis.

If we are serious about research in leadership, we need to come down to earth and do a whole lot better than interviewing the usual suspects. Update: I keep waiting for an invitation to another of their roundtables – but they haven't called me.

The three 'magic' words: transparency, clarity and fairness

These three organizational 'magic' words manage to get mixed up a lot. It's hard to believe because they are so different. But people love the mixing because the use of language in organizational life has a sort of 'complete freedom', which results in lots of 'prêt-à-porter' word concepts. So, 'magic' here has to be interpreted as producing an abracadabra effect: use them and many doors will be open (even if their meaning is mixed up).

More than once I have seen these three 'magic' words in a single value system as if their combination validates the good intentions of the company and provides a stamp of integrity and honesty (incidentally, two more 'magic' words).

Organizations seem to thrive in conceptual muddle. My friend and brilliant inter-cultural consultant, David Trickey, calls this 'a conspiracy of self-inflicted ambiguity'.

My definitions, to dispel the magic a bit:

Transparency: everybody can see it, there are no secrets

Clarity: everybody understands

Fairness: nobody is discriminated against

That's it!

Something may be transparent to the staff, but unclear, even opaque. Something may be clear for management, but not transparent to others. Something may be fair to people, but it's not clear or transparent.

Problems arise when there is a free, interchangeable use of the three. People tend to assume that something is unfair when it's not transparent. But transparency does not make it automatically fair. There is nothing unfair about not making something transparent to everybody. It may or may not be unfair. Some managers preach transparency, but they mean clarity. Other managers preach fairness, on the basis of clarity and transparency to all. But the issue may be very unfair, yet, clear.

I suggest you carry on playing with the permutations but avoid at any cost the indiscriminate use. Beware of the prolongation of 'self-inflicted ambiguity'.

I hope I am clear, have been transparent in my intentions and you find these points fair.
If not, I will have to start again.